The English Department offers a major in English and minors in Writing, Literature, Journalism, English (general), and Narratives of Health and Body. All of our programs are designed to be flexible so each student has the opportunity to shape their own course of study, which may include a variety of literature, film, and writing courses. The department offers courses in American, English, and World literatures with a special emphasis on literatures of historically marginalized communities. In addition, the department is particularly strong in creative writing and journalism.

Studying English enables students to examine the world and human experience through its cultural texts. The study of literature and film and other textual forms develops within students a powerful understanding of how narrative and language shape us and the world around us. The English Department strives to develop readers and writers who are empathetic and capable of deep critical analysis with the ability to write creatively and persuasively.

The English major goes well beyond the examination of literary texts and writing practices and encourages students to become more thoughtful and fluent when engaging different ideas and cultures, ultimately leading to greater insight into themselves, those around them, and the communities in which they participate. English majors are able to transfer their skills in creative and critical reading and writing to a variety of professional contexts, while also drawing on their facility with words and story to better understand, engage with, and critique ideas and institutions in their personal, professional, and civic lives.

The English major offers students the opportunity to move outside of the classroom and to apply their developing knowledge of writing, literature, and textual understanding in real-world civic and professional settings through fieldwork, internships, research, or other kinds of applied and sustained engagement with real audiences and communities.

The Writing Center
The Writing Center, an extension of the English Department, offers students the opportunity to discuss their writing with trained, peer writing consultants. Writing consultants are recruited from across the university community and represent a variety of majors. Writing consultants can support and help guide student-writers at any stage of a project, from its inception to its final draft. The Writing Center is a safe, non-judgmental space with its sole purpose being to help students successfully navigate any writing project, curricular or extracurricular. The Writing Center is located on the third floor of Sullivan and is open Monday thru Friday. Please stop by or call 508-929-8112.

English Honor Society
The English Department has an active chapter of Sigma Tau Delta, an international honor society in English. Juniors and Seniors who demonstrate strong academic achievement may apply for membership.

Courses
EN-099 Developmental English
Concentration on language basics - spelling, vocabulary, grammar, usage - with practice in writing sentences and paragraphs. Carries developmental credit (not counted toward degree requirements.) Every year. 3 Credits

EN-101 College Writing I
LASC Categories: WR1
Prerequisites: PLCMT-EN1
College Writing I focuses on writing as critical inquiry, reflection, and communication. Students practice the fundamentals of effective writing, emphasizing planning, drafting, revising, and editing. (Required of all students unless exempted by the English Department) Fall and Spring and every year. 3 Credits
EN-102 College Writing II
LASC Categories: WR2
Prerequisites: EN-101
EN-102 builds upon EN-101 and focuses on research writing, synthesizing sources, critical analysis, argumentation, and information literacies. Students practice the fundamentals of effective writing in collaborative and academic communities, while evaluating and using sources in different rhetorical situations. This course is designed to help students develop transferable skills and strategies that may be applied to a variety of audiences and in a range of situations.
Fall and Spring and every year. 3 Credits

EN-103 First-Year Writing Lab
This one credit course offers supplemental support for students concurrently enrolled in a section of EN101: College Writing I. First-Year Writing Lab reinforces the fundamentals of effective writing practices and processes, specifically the practices of drafting, revising, editing, and proofreading. In First-Year Writing Lab, students will work Lab-specific assignments and activities, as well as on assignments from their specific first-year writing sections, with the goal of learning to transfer and apply a developing set of rhetorical abilities across a variety of writing situations. First-Year Writing Lab is offered pass/fail only.
Fall and Spring and every year. 1 Credit

EN-107 Journalism and Democracy
LASC Categories: WAC
This course introduces students to the history of American journalism and the role of journalism in democratic and non-democratic societies. [Cross-listed with CM-107]
Every year. 3 Credits

EN-115 LGBTQ+ Narratives
LASC Categories: DIV, ICW, TLC
This course approaches narrative as a key tool for LGBTQ+ individuals to create life-sustaining community, establish identity as artists and activists, and combat social discrimination and stigma. Students will analyze a diverse array of material, including memoir, fiction, poetry, painting, film, and music. Collectively, we will ask what qualifies as a LGBTQ+ narrative: is it determined by the content of a piece, its formal manifestation, the identity of its creator, or something else entirely? The intersections of gender identity and sexual orientation with other components of selfhood-including race, disability, and class-will be essential to our conversations.
Alternating and every 2-3 years. 3 Credits

EN-120 Race in Comics
LASC Categories: TLC, USW, DAC, DIV
Comics offers a unique combination of tools for representing race. Artists have long used either language or visual art to think about identity, but comics merges the two in new ways. In this course, students analyze innovative comics and graphic novels/nonfiction to better understand why this medium is such a productive way to reflect on racial identity. How do comics authors engage with the difficult history of racial caricature and the longstanding lack of diversity in the field? And what can the combination of image and text say about the tension between appearance and identity?
Every 2-3 years. 3 Credits

EN-132 World Literature
LASC Categories: GP, DAC, TLC, DIV
The course examines the major authors in world literature from ancient to modern times; however, in a given semester the course may focus on one particular time period. All areas of the world are covered, including such areas as Africa, Europe, the Americas. An emphasis will be put on cultural, sociological, historical, and philosophical influences on the literature. Such authors may be included as Chinua Achebe, Pablo Neruda, Bei Dao, Salman Rushdie, Nadine Gordimer, Edwidge Danticat, and Bessie Head.
Fall and Spring and every year. 3 Credits

EN-214 Introduction to Digital Humanities
LASC Categories: QAC, WAC
Prerequisites: EN102 or equivalent
This course is an introduction to the use of digital technologies in the analysis, production, and reception of texts. Most of us already are digital scholars, as we read information electronically, collaborate online, and write texts using computers. This course addresses instances in which we create or use information that is uniquely keyed to digital technologies, such as developing visual representations of narrative, using artificial intelligence to assess writing, statistically analyzing poetry, or crowd-sourcing creative and academic writing. This course will explore the theoretical and practical implications of reading and writing in a digital age.
Other or on demand and every year. 3 Credits

EN-217 Introduction to Narrative Studies of Health and Medicine
LASC Categories: HBS, ICW
This course offers students an introduction to narrative representations of illness, health, and healing. Students consider works of literature, literary theory, and film in their narrativization of the dynamic between patient and clinician, the role (and limitations) of empathic recognition, the ethical issues in healthcare settings, and rhetorical constructions of normalcy, disability, disease, agency, and well-being. The course introduces students to literary traditions as well as to journalistic and narrative methodologies that inform a humanistic approach to stories about the science of health and medicine.
Alternating and every year. 3 Credits

EN-220 English Literature (beginnings to 1798)
LASC Categories: ICW, GP, TLC
The diverse course covers major works and authors from the beginnings of literature in the British Isles up until the end of the 18th century. Authors included are major writers Chaucer, Shakespeare, and Milton, as well as other authors such as Amelia Lanyer, Margery Kempe and Olaudah Equiano. Emphasis will be put on the historical and sociological environment as well as the literary and thematical developments that each work demonstrates. The course may focus on such themes or events as women's roles, human rights, the Atlantic slave trade and colonization.
Fall and Spring and every year. 3 Credits

EN-221 English Literature (1798-Present)
LASC Categories: GP, ICW, TLC
An introduction to major developments in the literatures of England from 1798 to the present alongside the socio-political debates that influenced them. Though intended as an overview of more than two centuries of literature, the course focuses on how differences in power between various social groups within England and across the world intimately informed the period's cultural output. The readings consist of a diverse range of genres - lyrical poetry, realist novels, abolitionist lifewriting, travelogues, stage comedies - that engage with key issues that will shape class discussions and lectures, including colonization, urbanization, rising literacy rates, technological advancements, and more.
Alternating and every year. 3 Credits

EN-230 Environmental Literature
LASC Categories: CA, ICW
This course will focus on how environmental writers challenge and change how we perceive human ecological relationships to the natural world. We will address the following questions: How have writers challenged us to think about our place in a shared world and our responsibilities toward our ecological communities? How have writers attempted to awaken us to our connections to the natural world and the non-human other? How do these connections feed our mind, body, and spirit? We will also consider their warnings of what happens when we ignore our ecological selves, our ecological communities, and our ecological responsibilities.
Every 2-3 years. 3 Credits

EN-358 Disability Stories, Disability Studies
LASC Categories: DIV, HBS, ICW, TLC
Prerequisites: EN-102 or EN-202.
This course introduces students to the field of disability studies by examining depictions of disability in literature. We will discuss foundational texts and consider key terms including ableism, access, medicalization, representation, and prosthesis. We will also discuss the ways that disability intersects with other aspects of identity such as race, class, gender, and sexuality. Our readings will span multiple centuries and will include poems, memoirs, films, and critical essays by leading disability studies scholars. Together, we will question the construction of bodily, mental, and social norms and analyze how narratives both resist and conform to cultural conceptions of disability. Alternating and every 2-3 years. 3 Credits

EN-370 Antislavery Literature
LASC Categories: TLC, USW, DAC, WAC, DIV
Prerequisites: EN-102 or EN-202 or EN-250
This course traces the literary history of the antislavery movement in the Atlantic World: writing in a range of genres, antislavery writers made a significant contribution to the campaigns to end the slave trade and slavery. These texts also shaped the history and memory of legal enslavement and its aftermath. While the Atlantic System of legal slavery ended in the nineteenth century, an even larger system of illegal slavery still exists, and so the course concludes by considering the work of contemporary antislavery writers and what they might learn from their predecessors.

Program Learning Outcomes

- Analyze and document the history, conventions, methodologies, and practices of literary, cultural, and rhetorical studies as a form of academic inquiry, a pathway for personal growth and expression, a framework for engaging with critical moral and ethical issues, and a site of analysis of identity construction and power inequities.

- Analyze texts across historical, geographical, and cultural boundaries and interrogate workings of difference, hierarchy, and power, both within and across texts, including the intersections of multiple identity categories including ability, class, ethnicity, gender, nationality, race, religion, and sexuality.

- Interpret a variety of forms, genres, styles, structures, and modes of writing, while articulating and demonstrating the value of close reading in the study of literature, creative writing, rhetoric, media, and other forms of discourse.

- Design, conduct, and deliver research projects effectively and ethically.

- Produce and analyze writing across a wide range of modes, including creative, professional, personal, print, and digital expression.

- Apply the content and methodologies of literature and writing studies outside of the classroom, in civic and professional environments.
